Sexually explicit video game blamed for attempted rape by man who later murdered a woman, court told A man who attempted to rape a woman in a sexually explicit video game was caught because she was laughing at him, a court has heard. Robert Rigg, 33, told the jury at Hull Crown Court that a 14-year-old girl was laughing at him because she knew that he was playing a game called "Epic Rap Battles of History". The teenager was arrested and the game was seized. Rigg, of St Mary's Avenue, Fulwood, was later cleared by a jury of attempted rape. But he admitted two charges of murder, and was yesterday jailed for a minimum of 33 years. Yesterday's victim, Amanda Price, was found dead at the site of Rigg's previous address on May 22 last year. A post-mortem examination of her body revealed she had been strangled. He initially denied involvement in her murder, but later confessed when he was arrested in January for the attempted rape of a 14-year-old girl on February 14 the previous year. The game in which Rigg was playing is an online version of the "Rock Band" series, in which players interact with cartoon characters through singing and dancing to music and lyrics. Rigg told the victim, who was of Asian origin, to leave the house, telling her "I'm not here to do that", according to a police summary of a 999 call made by the teenager. Rigg added that "he was only playing the game", and that he would "stop doing it and explain it to her". The victim told officers that she was "freaking out" because Rigg was "acting like he was really going to do it". At one point Rigg lifted his hood, revealing two yellow flowers on his hair. The victim told police that the two flowers meant "that he was going to rip me off the streets", the court was told. Judge David Stock

We were fortunate to spend a few days in Kerala, where we were able to experience many of these elements. I can't put into words how beautiful Kerala is, and how that beauty is found even in its smaller towns and villages. I am grateful for the time we spent there, and look forward to returning in the future. After the trip, I will be writing a number of travel articles about our time there. I'll be uploading them to this blog, as well as adding them to my Facebook page. We had the opportunity to visit the "family town," Kerala, which made for an excellent getaway from Mumbai. I will be writing more about it in a separate post.Free program appears online and is installed without charge in computers of all users HOUSTON, March 10, 2014 /PRNewswire/ — Veeam Software a leading provider of data backup and recovery solutions today announced availability of its Veeam Availability Suite for Microsoft Windows 7 and Windows Server 2008. I tried this: library("arules") data("islands") rules KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuters) - Pakistan has shut its air space to Chinese airspace in a response to China's continued downing of Pakistani military aircraft, a source at the Pakistani Foreign Ministry said on Wednesday, denying Indian media reports that Pakistan had ceded the airspace. Pakistan has not publicly commented on China's actions but the source at the Foreign Ministry said the government had made it clear to all foreign airlines that no aircraft from China would be allowed to fly to the country because of Pakistan's heightened sensitivity over violations of its airspace. The source also confirmed the Pakistani military had carried out airstrikes in Pakistan's Baluchistan Province and said the position in Baluchistan was ongoing. "It has been confirmed that China has attempted to violate our national airspace in Baluchistan and on no account shall we allow it. Because of our sensitivity about the sovereignty of our nation, no aircraft from China will be permitted in our skies," the source said. The source said Pakistan had ordered the denial of Chinese airspace to Indian aircraft as well. "There are many Indian flights operating from Dubai to eastern China. If they have a complaint, Pakistan is willing to address it," the source said. Asked about the sources who had reported that Pakistan
